

Nopany High

Nopany High celebrated the Teachers' Day on September 5 this year with the due augustness and jubilation. The students, who had organised the ceremony, put forth some musical stage shows, dances and recitations that they had delectably prepared for the teachers. Like every year, the students had also created individualized certificates for all the teachers - assigning them appropriate honorific titles. And it was indeed a proud occasion for the teachers as they accepted the testimonials from their students.

It was also a stroke of fortune for the school to have the eminent children's author, Dipanwita Roy, grace this occasion of Teachers' Day. Fresh from receiving the prestigious Bal Sahitya Academy Award, Roy brought a unique depth to the celebration. How fitting it was to have a storyteller on Teachers' Day, for it is often said the best teachers are storytellers, and the lessons we carry longest are those learned through stories.

Roy's presence turned the event into a memorable learning experience for the students, who eagerly engaged with her. Even the teachers, inspired by her wisdom, participated in the lively interaction.
